Sara Maitland's 'Gossip from the Forest' is a richly digressive study of woods and words. In her latest book, Maitland sets out to explore the connection between woods and words. Sometimes alone, but more often accompanied by a fellow writer, local expert or by her son, Adam Lee, who took the monochrome photographs with which the book is illustrated,...

An imaginative study examining both the vital role forests play in fairy stories and their vanishing significance from modern life. For Maitland (A Book of Silence, 2009), employing both research and her own personal study of forests throughout the United Kingdom, the untamed wild is both a powerful symbol of hidden dangers and a challenge to personal responsibility.
